WELCOME

On behalf of the Society for Investigative Dermatology, our colleagues in the European Society for Dermatological Research and the Japanese Society for Investigative Dermatology we would like to invite you to the 7th International Investigative Dermatology (IID) Meeting in Orlando Florida. The IID Meeting is a unique opportunity, occurring only once every 5 years, and brings together basic, translational and clinical scientists all focused on advancing our understanding of skin biology and disease. This meeting brings together scientists from across the globe, highlighting the latest in cutting edge science. Our venue in Orlando will bring us all together at one beautiful site allowing for the maximum in collaboration, interaction, and camaraderie throughout the meeting. Make your plans now to join us in this celebration of outstanding science and international collaboration in a beautiful Florida setting.

Russell P. Hall, MD
 SID President

Robert Swerlick, MD
 SID President-elect

On behalf of the European Society for Dermatological Research, I join the Presidents of the Society for Investigative Dermatology and the Japanese Society for Investigative Dermatology in inviting you to the 2018 International Investigative Dermatology Meeting (IID2018) in Orlando from May 16th to 19th, 2018. During the past 5 years we have witnessed tremendous advances in dermatologic research and skin science, which have lead to the emergence of amazing targeted treatments for inflammatory skin diseases and skin cancer. Thanks to these developments, skin is now positioning itself as a leading scientific model for many specialties and industry partners who see the skin as a major focus for gaining insights into disease mechanisms and therapeutic developments. At IID2018 we want to share this excitement with you and provide a unique setting for in-depth and cross-disciplinary discussions between dermatologists, basic scientists and biologists studying various aspects of the skin. We will make sure that every skin scientist from any location in the world has an opportunity to present their newest research at IID2018 and we will put special emphasis on the scientific and professional development of young trainees and early-career scientists. We look forward to greeting you in Orlando for this exciting meeting!

Michel Gilliet, MD
 ESDR President, 2017/2018

Every 5 years, members of all the investigative dermatology and cutaneous biology societies throughout the world gather together to exchange information and facilitate collaboration. The combination of high-quality science, outstanding interactions with international colleagues, and the enjoyable city of Orlando will make this a valuable and unforgettable experience. As none of the three sister societies, the European Society for Dermatological Research, the Society for Investigative Dermatology, and the Japanese Society for Investigative Dermatology, will have a meeting of their own in 2018, the International Investigative Dermatology Meeting will definitely be the hot-spot of dermatologic and cutaneous science in 2018! I hope to see many of you at this special event in 2018 in Orlando!

Akimichi Morita, MD/PhD
 Secretary-General of the JSID
